

Objects of the Institute of Directors’ Royal Charter

To promote for the public benefit high levels of skill, knowledge, professional competence and integrity on the part of directors, and equivalent office holders however described, of companies and other organisations.

To promote the study, research and development of the law and practice of Corporate Governance, and to publish, disseminate or otherwise make available the useful results of such study or research.

To represent the interests of members and of the business community to government and in the public arena, and to encourage and foster a climate favourable to entrepreneurial activity and wealth creation.

To advance the interests of members of the Institute, and to provide facilities, services and benefits for them.

A value proposition with three components

Connect

with peers facing similar challenges

Develop

the skills and knowledge that make better directors

Influence

the people making decisions that touch your world

We are a community

A network of peers exchanging knowledge, learning together and supporting each other

We are an authority

The source of knowledge and expertise for everything company directors need to know

We are a movement

A group of people with a common cause – creating better directors for a better world
